Eurozone GDP growth confirmed at 0.1%

The Eurozone economy registered marginal growth in the second quarter, as initially estimated, as growth in consumption partially offset the decline in investment, data shows. In the revised report, Eurostat confirmed that GDP grew 0.1% sequentially, after rising 0.6% in Q1. On a yearly basis, economic growth slowed to 1.5%, which was bigger than the initial estimate of 1.4%. (www.rttnews.com 05/09/25)

French upheaval overshadows ECB's queasy interest-rate hold

European Central Bank officials are likely to make an uncontentious judgment on interest rates in the coming week, even while nervously watching the political crisis raging at the heart of the euro area. By the time they meet in Frankfurt to almost certainly keep borrowing costs unchanged, France's government will probably have fallen, leaving an impasse over fiscal repair.
